Narberth Defeats Newton Team

Lost to Wayne Last Saturday Afternoon

By defeating the Newton A. A. team here Thursday evening Narberth broke the latter's winning streak of 18 games. The team, composed entirely of negro players, is one of the strongest of Philadelphia independent teams.

The game was of interest from start to finish. The visitors were conspicuous for their fast fielding and running, while the Narberth boys got in the hits when they were needed, running up a score of 11 runs.

Conspicuous among the visitors was Turner, who held down the center field position. He finished the game with three hits to his credit despite the fact that he has but one arm. In fielding he caught the ball, gave it a quick toss in the air, threw off his glove, and tossed the ball where it was needed. His dexterity was most interesting to watch.

The visitors showed their disappointment at having to leave their scalps behind, and begged Manager Wisler for a return game. It was arranged that they play Narberth again next Thursday evening, and they will be on hand loaded for bear. It promises to be about the most interesting contest of the season and a capacity crowd is being prepared for.

WAYNE WINS

Narberth lost a close scrap with Wayne last Saturday afternoon at Wayne. The game, which was originally scheduled as a league contest, was played as an independent game because of Wayne's withdrawal from the Main Line league.

FIRE AT GIBSON'S

A large frame building, used as a saw mill and storage shed, on the estate of Miss Mary K. Gibson, Wynnewood, was destroyed by fire last Sunday evening.

The Narberth Fire Company was called out about 7.30, and responded promptly. The two Ardmore Companies also were called out. The building, located about a hundred feet in the woods from Windsor and Wynnewood Avenues, was a mass of flames before the companies reached the scene, because of the delay in sending in an alarm. Flames, shooting into the air above the tops of the trees, drew residents from all parts of the Borough. The shed was entirely destroyed, and considerable damage was done to the machinery stored there. The damage has been estimated at over a thousand dollars.

Labels Narberth a Hick Town

Critic Still Living Despite Fatal Mistake

A specimen drifted into town the other day disguised as the Sheikh of Avenue A and almost had a duck sit because we were going to have a performance of the Swarthmore Chautauqua, thus showing his ignorance and temerity at one and the same time. We showed him the error of his ways and, heading him in the general direction of Merion, let him depart in peace.

Quite a theme might be written on the subject of "Oratory as a Lost Art." With the growth of transportation facilities, the theatre and the movies, people have lost interest in oratory. There was a time when one would drive miles in a buggy (less shock absorbers) just to hear some bird in his stuff on the subjects of States Rights or Slavery. That would constitute a big night and afford juicy conversational morsels for many a long winter evening. All this is merely the feeble attempt of the writer to prove that there is a kick and a real one in oratory. Have you ever heard a really good speech? No, not the average after dinner variety interspersed with "saw jokes." We mean a good one. Well, listen! A certain senator living not very far from here was asked to speak before a gathering of real estate men—think of it! Real estate men! He was not very well known and the hardboiled crowd prepared to sit back and doze politely till he got all tired and called it a day. But, in a few minutes, he had them and had them cold! They laughed and cried at his pleasure, he swayed them off their feet and had them listening as they never had before. That's oratory.

A number of years ago, William Jennings Bryan speaking on a Chautauqua circuit, gave to the history of oratory his speech entitled "Mother," and by it earned for himself the nickname of "Silver Tongue." The Chautauqua fosters oratory, and the clean thinking that gives to the world such speeches as Bryan's. The Swarthmore Chautauqua engages for its performances speakers of proven worth, and they speak on all sorts of interesting subjects—things that we ought to know and don't.

On the other hand, there are to be eye and ear entertainments as well. The Chautauqua has gotten to be a large and important contender in the theatrical booking agent game since they engage so many of the "talent" for their circuits. And, working on the theory that whatever is worth doing is worth doing better than the other fellow, they have good shows. To crash in on the Chautauqua circuit you have to do your stuff well.

Once upon a time, there was a man who decided to jump off Brooklyn Bridge (stop me if you've heard this one) and his friends tried to persuade him not to do it. He took a chance and now his name is well known throughout the world of slang. Now then, on September 13th, you take a Brodie and come to the Chautauqua and you will be more than satisfied. We thank you!

MEN TO THE FORE AGAIN

It's a fact that all roads lead to the Tennis Club on Saturdays. It's a very popular place at all times during the summer season, but Saturday, with the knowledge of a good game of tennis, a shower, and to top it off with a mighty good meal, makes the place even more attractive than the seashore.

The meal and service last Saturday left nothing to be desired unless it be a bigger appetite. This Saturday the men again take charge, and when we say "take charge," we mean they purchase, prepare and serve, in fact do it all with the exception of collecting the six bits per person, and a regiment of soldiers could not take that job away from Florence Fenno. It's going to be a real real, so don't miss it. Reserve early by calling Narberth 607-J.

Bryn Mawr Still Fighting Buses

Residents Object to Extension of Line

Residents of Haverford and Bryn Mawr are persisting in their efforts to have the newly established bus line from Narberth to Bryn Mawr abandoned or shortened.

It is claimed that the line from Ardmore to Bryn Mawr on Montgomery Avenue is a menace to safety and is not wanted by the residents. The Bryn Mawr Home News, which has added the voice of its columns to the opposition in the western end of the route last week carried the following article, which expresses the feeling of many of its readers:

Are Running Empty

"The busses are running on Montgomery Avenue as far west as Morris Avenue, Bryn Mawr, but we are informed by residents along the avenue from Ardmore to Bryn Mawr that they seldom see any passengers in the busses between these points.

The proprietor of the Bus Company, Mr. Mariani, was requested not to run the busses west of Anderson Avenue, Ardmore, until the matter had been adjusted satisfactorily to the residents of this section, but he has evidently been advised to run to Bryn Mawr until action is taken to have him stopped.

He has no doubt learned from the little patronage that the busses have received in Bryn Mawr and Haverford that the claim of the residents that there was no necessity for this service was well founded. If the people do not ride in the busses the question is, how long will he continue to run them where they are not desired, and only prove to be an additional danger to traffic on Montgomery Avenue?"

There is little or no opposition in Narberth, however, to the new route. It has been a convenience to many who wish to go to Ardmore from the Northern end of town, but, as expressed in the above article, is not much patronized west of Ardmore.

The Narberth School Board has completed arrangements with Vincent Mariani, the proprietor, to have the Narberth High School pupils transported to Lower Merion in the busses. He will pick them up at vantage points, in time to get them to the School before sessions commence. Details will be published in these columns at a later date.

THE MAN WHO IS CLIMBING

It is sometimes claimed that business men are desirous of holding down the masses of the people and keeping them in a condition of economic slavery. Yet there is nothing that gives more pleasure in any business community than to see some one rise out of a humble position and go ahead as the result of earnestness and industry.

In any community there can always be found men of that type. It is a pleasure to watch them as they gradually get a foothold. They may have come from discouraging backgrounds, yet from the start they had a certain determination to succeed that marked them as likely to rise.

In their first jobs these fellows would show anxiety to please. They were not watching the clock all the time, but were thinking principally of getting a good day's work done, and rendering good service. They put their heart into whatever they were doing.

A fellow of that kind is bound to attract notice, no matter how humble the work he does at the start. In due time someone sees that he is fit for promotion and he gets an opening higher up.

If he is employed by a business of some size, the heads of such a concern are looking for men who show capacity and willingness to work, and he will get every chance for advancement which he can make good use of. If he would like to start a little business of his own, capital can usually be found by those who prove their character and worth by honest and intelligent effort. And when such a fellow succeeds, no one is any happier about it than the business men of his own town.

If only all workers could show this spirit of improvement and advance, the production of the country would be greatly increased, cost of living would go down and wages rise, and a new era of human welfare would dawn.

THE SUPPORT OF INSTITUTIONS

The stranger who seeks a desirable home town for a place of residence often finds it hard to estimate the character of the community from exterior impressions. But there is one quite good test that he can apply, and that is in the way the institutions of the place are supported.

A man who at one time was contemplating settling in some city to carry on a certain type of business, and who was governed a good deal in his choice by the residential character of the various towns he considered, says that he adopted the following plan to form an impression of various cities. He secured the year book of the religious denomination to which he belonged, and studied the church statistics of the towns where he thought of going. If the Church in a certain town paid its minister a meager salary, if it had an inadequate church edifice for a town of that type, and if it raised but little money for music and other expenses, it seemed to him either as if business must lack prosperity in that city, or else that the people had not much public spirit.

But if these statistics showed that the Church was handsomely supported for a town of its class, it would look as if the people appreciated the higher standards of life and were prosperous enough to contribute liberally to public causes. He felt that such figures gave him considerable insight into the type of people living in a town.

There are, of course, many towns that have never achieved much material prosperity, yet which have fine people among whom it would be a pleasure to live. Yet if a city desires to be known as a good all around residential town, it ought to maintain such institutions as schools, churches, fraternal societies, clubs, etc., in ample shape, and if it does so it has a tremendous drawing card to attract new residents.

LEGAL AID ENLISTED TO ENFORCE JAP BEETLE LAW

District attorneys in counties where the Pennsylvania and the Federal Departments of Agriculture have established quarantines against the Japanese beetle were recently requested by Attorney General George W. Woodruff to give every possible aid to the government authorities in the enforcement of the regulations.

Prompt prosecution of quarantine violators was especially urged in the Attorney General's letter which was as follows:

"We have a very subtle public enemy, known as the Japanese beetle, for the reason that it was introduced from Japan in roots of iris plants a very few years ago. This beetle is endangering vegetation of practically all kinds and in that way not only the prosperity of our farmers and the beauty of our parks and gardens, but naturally, the very life of our people. The feeling about this danger is not one of hysteria. It is a menace which all that know about it feel must be combated early and vigorously if we want to prevent the spread of the danger.

"The Legislature recognized this danger and passed a law, which when printed will be Act No. 408, giving power to the Secretary of Agriculture to declare quarantines and making it a criminal offense to disobey his rules in that respect. The farmers are alarmed at the prospects of the rapid spread of this menace. Cities and towns have reason to be alarmed also, because the beetle attacks all forms of vegetation, including trees and shrubbery.

"Therefore, the purpose of this letter is to call your attention, as the prosecuting officer of your county, to the vital importance of everybody co-operating in carrying out the efforts of the Department of Agriculture to stop the spread of the Japanese beetle. You, as District Attorney, I am sure, will be willing, therefore, to help in this work. And I am asking whether I cannot safely tell the Secretary of Agriculture that if through the activities of his employees and representatives it is found necessary to take legal steps under the penal provisions of the inclosed law, you will lend the assistance of your office in every way possible, including prompt prosecutions when proper evidence has been made available to you."

UNDERSTANDING

A teacher was instructing a class in the infant Sunday School, and was making the little ones finish each sentence to show that they understood her. "The idol had eyes," the teacher said, "but it couldn't—""See!" cried the children. "It had ears, but it couldn't—""Hear!" was the answer. "It had lips," she said, "but it couldn't—""Speak!" once more replied the children. "It had a nose, but it couldn't—""Wipe it!" shouted the children. And the lesson had to stop for a moment until the teacher recovered.

COUNCIL MEETING

Street paving was again the big topic at the regular meeting of Borough Council last Monday night. A new petition was presented, this time from residents of Woodbine Avenue, from Iowa to Montgomery. These property owners ask that the Borough take up the paving of that stretch, assessing the cost against abutting properties.

This is the fourth petition now in the hands of Council. The first of these, concerning Conway, Stuart and Price Avenues, has been under way for a considerable period of time. The work is ready to proceed as soon as the financing is completed.

Petitions are also on file from residents of upper Forest, and Woodbine, from Essex to Narberth. This work will also go ahead with the other.

The third petition under consideration arises from Sabine Avenue, between Essex and Narberth. This involves the stretch of road in front of the School buildings. There has been agitation for a long while to have this street paved, but action has been difficult, because a bond issue, to pay for the half owned by the School Board, will be necessary. Council is considering the best course to pursue in this matter. It is probably too late to get the preliminary work done in time for a vote at the general election in November, and a special election may be necessary.

The new petition will be treated in the same manner as the first two, and the completion of the plans for financing will permit this work to be undertaken, thus removing several of the Borough's worst patches of road.

Fears for Safety

Residents of Essex Avenue, at the foot of the hill, have expressed to Council and Burgess Metzger their fears for the safety of school children because of the fact that the two lines of buses now cross in that part of Essex Avenue. The danger of the heavy vehicles travelling in both directions has been felt by a number of residents, and requests have been made, either for a re-routing, or a change of schedule to lessen the danger.

Mr. Wentz, chairman of the Committee on Highways and Sewers, reported that the Narberth Avenue bridge had been repaired. The work was delayed by the railroad because of repairs arising from the wreck at Villa Nova, but was undertaken the first of the month. The approaches have been fixed, and a new plank floor laid. In addition to these changes, new structural parts were placed in the bridge, and it is now in a safe condition, and comfortable for occupants of autos who were formerly bounced about by the rotten planks.

On Wednesday night of this week nearly a score of builders, architects, masons, plumbers, etc., assembled in Council chamber to review and discuss the proposed new building law. The ordinance was taken up section by section, and criticized by those present. The law, written by Mr. Hall, after an intensive study of numerous other codes, was introduced and passed first reading at Monday's meeting. It will be presented for second and final reading next month, to go in effect on the first of October.

Send in Fireside Items.

WYNNE FARM

ESSEX AVENUE AT MONTGOMERY

Right on top of the hill! Probably the highest section in Narberth. Seven long time residents of "Our Town" have recently purchased homes and building sites in this development. Surely their judgment on Narberth property is a valuable criterion of the desirability of WYNNE FARM.

But only a few more may be fortunate in securing homes or building sites in this beautiful development. Just one house left, not quite finished (built by A. C. Shand, Jr.). The house will soon be sold, and we don't expect to have a bit of ground left next Spring! Why not consider WYNNE FARM today? Full information on request.

PIONEERS

Every great industry has been built upon the dreams and sacrifices of pioneers who lived in advance of their times. Those men who established the gas business, more than a century ago, were met with jeers, rebuffs and all kinds of antagonism. We of today are enjoying the results of their wisdom and labors. Yet in a measure we, too, are pioneers, for the wonders of gas service have not all been realized by any means.

INTERESTING NEW LIBRARY BOOKS

The last bulletin issued by the Community Library included an unusually interesting lot of non-fiction.

Frank G. Carpenter, who has written so much on Travel, has given his readers another book, this time on "Alaska, our Northern Wonderland." The visit of the late President Harding to Alaska has made this book very timely, but you will want to travel there, too, after you have read it. Alaska is not the land of snow and ice that people have so long believed. Wild flowers bloom everywhere and delicious fruits and vegetables grow to great size. The book also contains many humorous stories about the average American's conception of Alaska's size and climate.

Another book that will appeal to the men especially is "In the Wake of the Buccaneers" by Hyatt Verrill. Here is a tale of pirates. A cruise in the Caribbean Sea over the very waters where the pirates ruled—in a ship manned by descendants of real pirates.

The Letters of Franklin K. Lane have a fascination that holds the reader literally spell-bound. The late Secretary of the Interior was first of all a Statesman rather than a politician, a thorough American and Humanitarian rolled into one; he had a sense of humor that was a delight and a treat, and he knew how to write. The result is that his "Letters" make a volume that is as enlightening, charming and altogether enjoyable as any book published in a long, long time.

"My Life and Work," Henry Ford, is a timely study of a remarkable man, and contains a clear statement of Mr. Ford's ideas on business, government and politics.

Curiously enough, "Mr. Podd," one of the most popular of the newer novels, is believed by many people to be a "fictionizing" of the same Henry Ford. The story centers around "Mr. Podd's Peace Ship," and what happened when the party was marooned on a desert island.

Baseball

There was a cordon of cops on the scene, and anyone who whispered to his neighbor was courting arrest. Wayne was resolved to have no riot such as that which broke up the game on July Fourth.

Townsend pitched excellent ball, with 11 strike outs to his credit, but the second inning was too much for him. Narberth nearly tied the score in the last round, but couldn't quite make the grade.

WELL, WHAT IS IT?

In the motion picture "Robin Hood," Lady Marian desires to send a message to the Earl of Huntingdon and chooses Little John to act as her messenger. She presents John with a scroll which is protected by what seems to be a black case or tube.

As she handed it over, a small boy in the audience asked his mother what it was.

"That's a flashlight," she answered in a loud voice.

"Don't show your ignorance, Mary," snapped her husband. "They didn't have flashlights in those days. That's a thermos bottle."

GENEROUS BOSS

"The boss offered me an interest in the business today."

"He did!"

"Yes, he said that if I didn't take an interest pretty soon he'd fire me."

RETORT COURTEOUS

Prospective Guest (engaging rooms in a hotel)—"This room's too dark—it reminds me of a prison."

Hotel Clerk—"Yes, sir, it's just a question of what one is used to."
